

Fireplaces

A presentation of fireplaces built in brick

Fireplaces

The fireplace has been hugely important to human civilization. Ever since our ancient ancestors discovered and learned how to control fire, we have harnessed its fascinating power, making good use of all the opportunities it provides and protecting ourselves from its devastating potential. It kept our ancestors warm, provided them with hot food, and protected them from predators in the dark.

Over time, fireplaces moved indoors, first as an indispensable necessity and then as status symbols. To this day, the fireplace is the natural centrepiece of any room where people gather, and architects often design them accordingly.

This presentation features 27 contemporary fireplaces built with a variety of Petersen bricks. We hope it will inspire many beautiful new fireplaces.

TECHNICAL NOTE

Fireplaces should only be built by experienced tradespeople and in compliance with all regulations for planning and construction. Petersen Tegl bricks are not intended for cladding in the fire zone. Refractory stone material should be used for that purpose.
